Mr. Jerome Burtt

TO JEROME BURTT, THE MAN WHOM WE HAVE LEARNED TO CALL "FRIEND" - - A WORD THAT SHOWS HOW HE HAS CAPTURED OUR HEARTS - - TO THE PATIENT, KINDLY MAN THAT IS OUR PRINCIPAL,
THIS BOOK IS RESPECTFULLY
DEDICATED.

MR. JEROME BURTT, PH. B., A. M.

PRINCIPAL

Mr. Jerome Burtt

FORTY years ago, in the town of Biddeford, Maine, a boy was born, destined to become the Principal of the High School of Commerce.

Although he did not know what the future held for him, Principal Burtt's education has been such as to enable us to have a remarkably well-equipped man as the head of this school. His higher education was acquired at Mount Hermon School, Yale University, and at Teachers' College, Columbia University. While at Mount Hermon School, Mr. Burtt was Alumni Editor of the Hermonite, the school paper. In addition to this, Mr. Burtt has taken courses at Boston and Harvard Universities.

Mr. Burtt has not only degrees and diplomas, but also actual experience as a teacher and principal. At Mount Hermon and at Adelphi Academy, Brooklyn, he was a teacher of mathematics. From this position he became Submaster of Quincy, Mass., High School. After holding this position for three years, he was appointed Principal of Framingham, Mass., High School; and from here he went to a suburb of Detroit, Michigan, as Principal of the Grosse Point High School. In September, 1930, he came to Commerce to take Mr. Ellis's place.

In 1916, Mr Burtt married Miss Mildred M. Flagg. They now have two children: Olive, thirteen; and Norman, eight. In the summer the whole family goes to Uneeda Rest, in Orange, Massachusetts, where fishing-poles, bathing-suits, and oars reign supreme. Water sports, however, are not his only enjoyments, for he is fond of bowling, tennis, and skating — to say nothing of reading. Mr. Burtt has also traveled extensively, both in Europe and in America.

Two Friends

When we think of Commerce, two faces rise before our eyes: one, a square, quiet face with a comrade's eyes; the other, a gravely benign face with the deep-set eyes of a dreamer and doer.

Two men — and Commerce! Mr. Ellis dreamed it true, and Mr. Burtt is carrying on from the point where the older man was forced to lay down a well-loved task. Each man a friend; each man a guide. Two men — beloved of Commerce.

Somehow, it is hard to make words express our feelings for Mr. Burtt. If we could only take our thoughts and lay them before him, he could realize, perhaps, that which is so difficult for us to say. Honest, sincere liking and a deep, abiding sense of friendliness, our thoughts would bring; admiration of a man square-cut and clean; respect for his honesty; delight in his sense of humor, quiet but strong; admiration of a man fine in mind and body; realization that here is one whom it would be well to follow.

"Friend" we call the two, Mr. Burtt and Mr. Ellis. "Friend" — a small word, often-used, and yet what a vast meaning lies behind its simpleness. The word is true of the men to whom it is given.

Good-bye, Commerce High

[To the tune of Annie Laurie]

Happy school days now are ending,
We leave for life's career.
To our teachers just and friendly
We give a hearty cheer.
We give a hearty cheer
For help and sympathy;
And now, dear Commerce High,
We say a fond good-bye.

We'll soon part from our school friends,
Friends who we know are true,
And one of our saddest moments
Is when we bid adieu.
Is when we bid adieu,
To happy, smiling years;
And now, dear Commerce High,
Your lessons we'll apply.

Our motto still will guide us
Though from our school we part;
We leave with deep regret,
Sweet memories in our heart.
Sweet memories in our heart,
Which ne'er will be forgot;
And now, dear Commerce High,
We say our last good-bye.

History—Class of January 1931

At last, the big day of our life has come, CLASS DAY. Three years ago today, we were allowed the privilege of sitting in the assembly hall to watch the grand ceremony of our superior schoolmates, the seniors, on their Class Day.

After our newness as freshies had worn off, we heard rumors of a class election of officers. During our XA semester, we were organized as a class under our capable faculty adviser, Miss Helen Lynch, with Miss Jane Roberts as assistant. A nominating committee was appointed, and the following officers were nominated and elected:

President: Janet Barnes Secretary: Anna La Rose
Vice-President: Evelyn Walker Treasurer: Beatrice Sturgis
Auditor: Joseph Maroney

The first big event in our young lives was the XA tea party, which took place in the afternoon. Our elders wanted to make sure we received our much needed beauty sleep.

Our freshman year with all its heartaches and sorrows sped along rapidly, and we elected new officers to guide us through a more important year.

President: Betty Doyle Secretary: Anna La Rose
Vice-President: Evelyn Walker Treasurer: Beatrice Sturgis
Auditor: Eleanor Gilday

At Christmas in our XIA year we combined with the XIB's and glee clubs and gave a Christmas assembly under the direction of Miss Vera Eldridge. We followed the pleasant tradition of inviting the members of the Home for Aged Women and the Home for Aged Men as our guests.

In May 1930 we had our XIIB Hop, which was in the form of a yacht club dance. This proved to be one of the most successful and original in the history of Commerce.

The height of our glory came at last. We were seniors — SENIORS. Listen to that word. The glory of it still rings in our ears. We cast pitying glances down at those poor little freshmen, and we wondered if the seniors of our freshman days had the same opinion of us.

Our last class election came, and we chose the following officers:

President: Raymond Tatro Secretary: Anna La Rose

Vice-President: Helen Serafino Treasurer: Beatrice Sturgis

Auditor: Rose Whelan

Several members of our class have distinguished themselves, either in school or out. Our class actress, Anna La Rose, and a close runner-up, Betty Doyle, surprised us all by the remarkable dramatic ability which they disclosed in the school play, Sherwood. During this year, Betty Doyle took the position of Editor-in-Chief of the Commerce paper, with several members of the class under her supervision.

We were all pleased when Frank Astaldi, never off the maximum honor roll, was awarded the medal for efficiency in the study of American history.

Outside of school, Helen Sears won the title of champion Irish dancer of Massachusetts and Connecticut, and Barbara Warner was awarded the title of best all-round girl at the Y. W. C. A. camp.

For two and a half years our class worked under the leadership of our beloved former principal, Mr. Carlos B. Ellis. Every day we try to live up to the standards he has set for us. We hope that we can prove to Mr. Ellis that the Class of January 1931 has made the school a little better for being a part of it.

During the summer we were wondering what our new principal would be like. We soon found out. On the street Mr. Burtt proved to be a good fellow, because if he was near enough, he spoke; if not, he would wave his hand in a friendly manner. He never overlooked one of us.

Oh, and that first assembly! Shall we ever forget the anxiety we endured before his opening sentence, which proved to be a joke? We all came to the same opinion. "He's all right."

Now comes the hardest part of all, — the saddest time in all our three years — the final parting. Very soon now, they will be the past — the happiest three years of our lives. But always, wherever we go and whatever we do, we will endeavor to follow our school motto, INDUSTRY AND INTEGRITY.

Lois S. Ducham

Will of the Class of January 1931

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS, that we, the Class of January 1931, of the High School of Commerce, in the City of Springfield, County of Hampden, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being of sound mind, memory, and judgment, do hereby make, declare, and publish this our last will and testament; and do earnestly desire that these, our last requests, be carried out as hereinafter directed.

First: To our two principals, Mr. Carlos B. Ellis and Mr. Jerome Burtt, we give and bequeath our heartfelt appreciation for their wise counsel and unfailing help during our three years in the High School of Commerce.

Second: To Miss Helen M. Lynch, our faculty adviser, we give and bequeath our utmost thankfulness for her untiring and ever-ready assistance to our class.

Third: To Miss Jane Roberts, our assistant adviser, we express our thanks for the benefits we have derived from her indispensable services.

Fourth: To the faculty we express our sincerest gratitude for their unfailing efforts in advising and preparing us for our life's work.

Fifth: To Mr. Walker we give and bequeath this compact containing white powder, so that he may tone down that ever-apparent blush.

Sixth: To Mr. G. Donald Melville we leave our appreciation for his efforts to make our Caduceus a success.

Seventh: Walter Kowal and Sam Krasnovsky leave to Mrs. Davis this shorthand dictionary to use in her future shorthand classes, when in doubt of a word.

Eighth: We, the entire class, leave our sincere sympathy to the faculty, for the grief that our departure will cause them.

Ninth: Carl Greene leaves all his A's in French to Miss Lynch, so that she may use them over again.

Tenth: Beatrice Sturgis bequeaths to the incoming freshman treasurer her ability to handle the shekels.

Eleventh: Albert Peyser leaves the secret of his marcel wave and his schoolgirl complexion to Melvin Pauly.

Twelfth: Robert Payne leaves to Kenneth Andersen his ability to "string" the opposite sex.

Thirteenth: Dot Feiner wills her ability in the art of make-up to any freshman who desires to be noticed.

Fourteenth: To the present XIIB class we leave our seats in assembly hall, because we have no further need of them.

Fifteenth: Robert Sproul leaves his ability to argue, to be divided among the members of Mr. Walker's coming law class, so that there will be more lively discussions.

Sixteenth: Julietta Way leaves one foot of her stature to Mary Curto.

Seventeenth: Frank Astaldi, Dorothy Bartlett, Eleanor Gagel, and Stella Presz leave their exalted positions on the honor roll to any four exceptional freshmen.

Eighteenth: We, the entire class, bequeath to the underclassmen these alibis: "I was absent yesterday," "The page is out of my book," "I lost it on the way to school," "It's in my locker," "It's in my home room," and "I lost the assignment."

Nineteenth: Lois Ducham leaves to Merle Daniels her position in the lunch room, so that she may earn her own spending money.

Twentieth: The outgoing staff members of Commerce leave their worries and troubles to undergraduates, with best wishes for the future success of the paper.

Twenty-first: Louis Mastroianni leaves his ability to bluff in English to anyone who can benefit by employing similar tactics.

Twenty-second: Kenneth Rollins wills to Thomas Gorman this box of animal crackers, so that in the future he may sharpen his teeth on their hides instead of on school books.

Twenty-third: Marjorie West leaves her art of giggling to Harold Stanton, so that his seriousness will not be so apparent.

Twenty-fourth: Anna La Rose wills her ability to toe-dance to Shirley Whiting, so that she will not gain avoirdupois.

Twenty-fifth: Rose Whelan leaves to Stuart Reynolds her title of Class Baby.

Twenty-sixth and last: Raymond Tatro, president of the January Class of 1931, wills to Stephen Lemanis, president of the June Class of 1931, the remains of this shattered gavel.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF , we, the Class of January 1931, have hereunto set our hand and seal at our residence in the High School of Commerce, City of Springfield, this fourteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirty.

JANUARY CLASS, 1931

Prophecy of the Class of January, 1931

"Oh! Overnight trips to the planets! Anna! That would be just the thing for us to do now." We, Anna La Rose and I, walked closer and read the signs. "Excursions to Venus, Mars, and the other planets. Rocket Rosera leaves every Monday at ten sharp." Anna and I then planned to take the trip next day, as the last rocket would leave then. If we didn't get that one, we would have to wait another week. Next day we came to the observatory where all rockets were shot, and to our surprise we found that the rocket had left two minutes earlier, and upon looking in the heavens we saw it traveling like nobody's business. Then we decided that we would look up the former Commercites who would rather stay on the earth than take any chances on Mars, Venus, Uranus, or any of the other worlds.

We returned to our apartment, deposited our luggage, and then started out again. Rounding a corner, we nearly ran into Marion Erickson and Elizabeth Finn, who were, they told us, co-workers in and owners of a large day nursery on the lower East Side of New York. Just then, a darling youngster approached us and said that her mother was coming. Who should it be but Betty Doyle, or I should say Mrs. Richard Fredette? Dick, Betty told us, was the radio mechanic of Station XXX Triple X. Marion and Elizabeth left us as they had to report to the nursery. Then Betty invited us over to her home as she was giving a party in honor of the engagement of Elizabeth Sharpe to Ralph Kuhnert.

At 7:30 P. M. we were ushered into the living room of the Fredette home. Before the prospective bride and groom arrived, we were entertained with a tap dance by Helen Sears and Catherine Reilly, teachers of the famous Sears-Reilly School of Tap Dancing. Helen holds the world's record for tap dancing, and Catherine is her excellent and capable manager. At the close of that selection, Martha Creeger was introduced. She had just arrived from North Carolina, where she is teaching home economics in a village high school.

At that instant the telephone rang, and as I happened to be nearest to it, I answered. To my surprise, who should it be but Julietta Way, or rather, Mrs. Selly Kramer? How glad we were that television had been perfected and that we could see each other. She called little Selly to the 'phone and we saw that he was the picture of his mother. Then the entertainment continued. Isabelle Lombard and Evelyn Walker gave a mandolin duet. They are connected with the Grand Opera Company of New York. Signor Maestrone, associated with the Italian School of Fine Music, furnished us with an accordion solo. Sadie Epstein, a teacher of music in the University of Chicago, contributed to the program by giving a selection entitled, "Happy School Days Now Are Ending." We all joined in the chorus. A suggestion made by the hostess resulted in the radio's being turned on. To our surprise, an announcement was made regarding the study of the planets, to be given in a lecture with pictures. We were over-joyed to hear this and resolved to attend it.

Ting-a-ling-a-ling---the doorbell rang. The future bride and groom entered. Immediately, congratulations followed. During the course of the evening we managed to talk to Becky, the prospective bride. She had, up to that time, been secretary to the president of the United Telephone Company. She also related, blushingly, that Ralph was the pilot of the largest passenger plane traveling between New York and California. We were delighted because we could engage that plane for the trip we had planned to take to Hollywood. In order to show his good sportsmanship, Ralph agreed to pilot us to our destination free of charge. We enjoyed ourselves immensely at the party, that evening. We bade good-night to our friends and left for our apartment.

Next morning on our way to the auditorium where the lecture was to be given, we bumped into Jennie Askinas and Hyman Weitzman. Rumor has it that they will seek the Little Church Around the Corner. She, Jennie, is a telegraph operator in Western Union. Hy is the owner of a haberdashery in Long Island. His clerks are Thelma Nelson, Sylvia Schlaferman, and Minnie Schimmel. We proceeded to the lecture hall after our short chat with these old friends. We entered just in time to hear the speaker introduced. To our astonishment, it proved to be Carl Askerberg. His lecture was worth hearing, and it gave us a fine knowledge of life on the planets.

After the lecture was over, we turned our steps homeward to prepare for our journey to California. We lounged around until the plane landed on our apartment roof for us. In five hours we had landed in California, "the land where men are men and women are glad of it!"

We really landed in Hollywood. I got out my binoculars and looked around. To the left, a flying picture was being directed. We couldn't see very well, so we thanked Ralph; and as curiosity bothered us, we directed our steps to the scene. As we approached, someone yelled, "Duck!" We did. None too soon, though, as an Army plane skimmed over our heads, and landed with a bump. It was, as you know or probably guess, piloted by the famous Robert Sproul. The picture was over for the day, and he introduced us to his leading lady, who was Harriet Kemple, but is now Mrs. Robert Sproul. They kindly invited us over for dinner at their home.

When we arrived at their luxurious home, the butler, whom we remembered as Robert Howlett, greeted us and ushered us in. The maid, in the person of Sigrid Stenstrom, took our wraps. In honor of our trip to Hollywood, we were given a welcome party by all former Commercites who lived there, some of whom were great movie stars. We later learned that Ralph Kuhnert had telegraphed that we were coming, and so they had invited for the evening, all our former schoolmates. After dinner, the guests began to arrive. We renewed acquaintance with Bradford Jamieson, the best comedian in Hollywood; Dot Bartlett, the second Colleen Moore; Helena Matarazzo, Stardom's Most Beautiful Girl; and Fletcher Wixon, her leading man in the picture, Believe It or Not, soon to be released. The picture is directed by Hyman Greenfield, who was also present. Other guests were constantly coming in. Louis Mastroianni, movieland's Joe E. Brown, and Adelaide Hickland, the new Charlotte Greenwood, made the evening very enjoyable. The butler announced Mr. and Mrs. Greene! The name sounded familiar but when they were ushered in, I do believe I stared at them. Why shouldn't I? Mrs. Carl Greene was formerly Irene Karp! They were enjoying a honeymoon trip in Hollywood. The evening passed rapidly, and our old friends were again saying good-bye.

The remainder of the week was spent in preparation for our trip to the planets. Sunday evening we took a sleeper, and arrived in New York at 8:00 Monday morning. The rocket was not to leave until ten, and so we had ample time to refresh ourselves. You may be sure that this time we reported at the observatory before the hour. We certainly were glad to see that Robert Kidd was to be our conductor and guide on the rocket. That alone made the trip worth while. But we were perplexed to see that we were the only passengers. Robert explained to us that elections for president of the planet Venus were held four days ago, and a great many people wanted to be in time for that and so had taken the previous rocket. Our rocket would be just in time to hear the returns. The rocket was shot at exactly ten o'clock. The experience on the trip to the planets was a thrill which we will never forget. Being shot through space is a feeling which cannot be expressed and certainly will never be forgotten.

We did not reach Venus until next morning, because of the fact that Bob Jennings had to make repairs to the rocket. We reached there, however, just in time to witness a burning building, which Robert told us had been the president's home the last time he had conducted the tour. When we landed, we heard that the president-elect was Joseph Maroney and that conspirators had burned his mansion. We congratulated him on his victory, and then were introduced to his bride, Rose Whelan, who is well liked by all. Maybe a rival suitor of Rose is to blame for the fire at her home. Time will tell. Later on, Mrs. Maroney presented us to some of our old friends whom we had longed to see since they had moved away. We met Barbara Warner and Sumner Kinsman, whose engagement was announced recently. Marjorie West, the class giggler, took on a more serious attitude and walked up the aisle, too. Louise Walker was wed about two months after graduation, but since then has been widowed, and married to Gerald Celley. Their ceremony, the first to take place in a rocket, was performed by Justice of Peace Richard Menzel, and the reception was to take place on Venus the day we arrived. What a break! The bridal party consisted of the following: maid of honor, Esther Lindquist, Joe Maroney's private secretary [We wondered if his wife ever got jealous]; best man, Michael Creanza, a scenario writer from the planet Mars; the brides-maids, Louise Harscheid, Lillian Orkin, Marion Wynn, and Elsie Papineau; the flower girl, Jean, the darling daughter of Myrtle Cote, I mean Mrs. Robert Jennings. As you all know, Venus is the goddess of love, and it is no wonder that we saw so many married couples there. Our guide told us that we should be ready to leave Venus in fifteen minutes. This we accomplished after many good-byes had been said.

An odd characteristic of Mars, the place where we next stopped, was that it resembled Venice because of the many canals. When we arrived there, George Burridge escorted us around the planet, pointing out all the spots of interest. We later learned that he is the chief boatman, probably due to the fact that he was captain of the crew during our high school days. His very devoted wife was formerly Frances Clark. George conducted us to a large business office, where we were introduced to the manager. We certainly were amazed to see that it was Alice Granstrom. Some former Commercites working with her were Hazel Chaffee, Angela Donabed, Valida Lapine, and Edith Lyman. From there we went into one of the large music stores to find the latest song hit. Madeline Houle and Ruth Church are the owners, and Albert Peyser is a steady customer. We wondered, when we left, if it were the music or the girls that "Al" was after. As we resumed our trip, George drew our attention to a large apartment house owned by Floyd Stebbins. It is the only one on Mars.

We entered, and after considerable trouble, located the owner. Out of curiosity, we asked who paid the rent most promptly. He replied that Madeline Schrade did. Is there anything behind that, Madeline?

From there we went to the Orphans' Home. The doctor in charge is Harry Vakil, and the nurse who supervises the orphans is Lois Ducham. She told us that she enjoyed her work immensely. Then she took us down to the gymnasium where the children played under the direction of Jerry Cornell. Her assistants are Rose Pellett, Alma La Flamme, the acrobatic teacher, and Laura Klines; and the boys' gym. teacher is Brower Hall. We laughed when we remembered that he turned somersaults for us on Class Day.

When we left, we decided to take a stroll. A sign attracted our attention It read: "Come in and make yourself beautiful!" We took advantage of the offer, as opportunity knocks only once. We were admitted by Ray Tatro, the beauty expert and artist. He was delighted to see us. The joyous greeting caused the manager to open her door to find out the reason for the great commotion. There she stood, one of our old pals, Helen Shea, associate owner of the Mars Beauty Salon. She greeted us and said that she regretted that she could not speak longer, but she had two customers who were getting primped up. We also needed a facial, so decided to give Helen the job. Upon entering her private room, whom did we see sitting in an easy chair, getting all dolled up? None other than the famous Miss Helen M. Lynch! ! ! We chatted with her for a while and learned that she and her side-kick, Miss Roberts, were going to the promenade given on Planet X. In another room, Miss Roberts was being given beauty treatment by Mafalda Collina. The other assistants were, in the salon, Cecile Messier and Catherine D'Ambrosia, and in the men's division, Jack Cooper.

Before I go any farther I must tell you what Anna La Rose is doing. She is the principal and director of the largest dramatic school in the United States. Three cheers for Anna! She is my devoted companion on all the trips that I take, and she certainly helps to make them enjoyable.

Again our guide informed us that we must leave and that our next stop would be Saturn. It was interesting to see the clever way that Robert steered the rocket between the rings. We tramped along First Ring Street until we came to an apartment house where we could lodge over night. We entered and were astonished to see that the sign read Bachelors' Apartment. We were just ready to leave when we were confronted by our old friends, Edith Haatanen, Mary O'Connell, and Margaret Paterson [you remember that they were the Three Musketeers of the January Class of 1931], the owners of the house. They had been notified of someone's presence by the device on their front door which told them if the supposed bachelors had any company with them. While we were talking, Kenneth Rollins entered. He, Stanley Cataldo, and Robert Payne had just returned from a trip to Uranus, which happened to be our next stop. We talked a long while before retiring, and as it happened, we were able to find accommodations with the owners of this apartment. Next morning, I read the Saturn Gazetteer while the girls were getting a light breakfast for us. In it I observed that Marion Slater and Beatrice Sturgis are the only two women members of the Saturn Stock Exchange. Dorothy Feiner, the girl most devoted to the stockingless age, is the manager of a hosiery shop. She has for her buyers in foreign planets, Selma Dunn, Eunice Steinberg, and Gertrude Goldstein. After learning these facts, we left the Bachelors' Apartment and went back to the rocket.

Here, Robert told us that our next trip was to Uranus. At the field where our rocket landed, we found a great crowd awaiting our arrival. As news of our trip had been radioed from Saturn, a welcoming speech had been prepared and was given by Carolyn Mills. The delegate from Planet X [or Pluto] was Irene Kelly; from Neptune, Muriel Sheldon; from Jupiter, Doris Bennett; and from Mars, Eleanor Lorimer. Among the crowd we recognized Elsie Murray, Ann Simonoff, Anna Albert, Anna Ardolino, Anna Stella, and Anna Cohen. It seems that the name Anna is quite popular on this planet and they all work on the reporting staff of the Planet Daily Annual. We discovered that William Fitzgerald grows grass for a living. He has a rushing business, because that is the only cure for people who have green complexions, and over one-half of the people of this world have green features. We were happy to see that none of our friends were affected with this disorder. Ethel Miller and Mila Miller are the owners of the Saturn Studio. It sounded so interesting that we entered. Can you guess! Blanche Govoni and Esther Hoffman, managers of the Uranus Tea Room, were primping up to have their pictures taken. They told us that they were planning to issue pamphlets advertising their tea room and had thought it not a bad idea to have their picture on the cards. Our conversation was interrupted by the command of the photographer's voice bidding the girls to come in and have themselves photographed. The voice sounded familiar to us, so we decided that we must find out who she was. To our astonishment it was Ruth Perry, our photograph editor back in the Class of January, 1931.

We left the studio and took a green bus to the broadcasting studio, where women announcers had been substituted because of the scarcity of men on the planets. The orchestra was sending its strains of music down to earth. We listened a while, and then Helen drew my attention to the fact that the orchestra was composed of all girls. I nodded assent and replied, "See Lillian Standish tackle that piano, and look at Oreta Ruell blow that saxaphone. I hadn't noticed Winifred Doty before. Boy! Can't she make those drums talk?" Those were the only Commercites that we saw there, except that the director, of course, was Yolanda Accorsi.

Helen and I wanted very much to visit the library, and as we had more then four hours to spend on this planet, we agreed to seek the reading room. After a great deal of roaming around, starting at one street and going around in circles arriving back at the same place, we managed to obtain a reasonable direction to the building. We entered a medium sized structure and walked into what was the circulating room. The librarians were very attentive to us. Why shouldn't they be? They were some of our old classmates back in the good old days. Mary Marcus, the head, and her assistants, Rose Golan, Ruth Boston,

Doris Schofield, Etoila Dufault, and May Siciliano, were the ones who were checking off the incoming and outgoing books. We managed to get a word in edgewise with them, but they were very busy. They told us that they enjoyed their work immensely. After looking up one or two novels to take back to our lodging house, we left the library. Among my books, I had carried home one which described how one can learn to play a violin in six weeks. In it were very many musical selections. The book interested me so greatly that I just had to see who wrote it. The author of this wonderful masterpiece was Frank Astaldi. It had been expected that he would do such a thing because of his great ability, even in school days, to make a violin talk.

Our reading was interrupted by the voice of our guide, who told us that we must get ready immediately for our trip to Jupiter. We packed in less than ten minutes and started off. After an exciting, long, swift trip, we finally came to the huge planet. We were disappointed to find that there was no one on the field when we landed. The place looked desolate. Walking further inland, we came to a large, red, brick building. Temptation bothered us, so we walked into the building, where at the front door we were greeted by a pleasant-faced gentleman, who appeared extremely familiar. He was the principal of this large school, the only one on the planet. No wonder we recognized him, for he was Walter Kowal. He escorted us around to the different rooms, the classes in which ranged from the first grade to the last senior class. He named a few of his so-called excellent instructors. They were Stefania Brzys, who taught home economics; Ruth Arnold, the dancing teacher; Eleanor Gagel, head of the business department; Sylvia Hyte, English instructor; and Antoinette Daigneault, school nurse. A sound of music was heard through the silence of the halls. Helen and I descended the stairs, to where the music was coming from. Quietly, we entered and sat down without any particular person noticing us. In front stood the professor with a banjo in his hand. He was Samuel Krasnovsky, the great banjo player, whose excellent ability helped to make our Class of January, 1931, put across their Class Day program. His able assistant, who played the piano, was Mary Barberi.

Leaving the school, my friend and I strolled along the streets for two or three miles, until we ran into Mary Figoni and Sadie Hurwitz, who told us that they were employed in the office of the school we had just left.

The last lap of our journey was to Planet X. This was to be an overnight trip, as we could return to the earth from that world early next morning. The trouble was now to find a place to lodge. Robert told us that this was the most peculiar of all the planets, as no hotels, boarding houses, or such structures were allowed. What could we do? Helen suggested looking in the directory for someone we knew. We agreed to do this and succeeded in finding the home of William Lewis and his wife, Violet Alm. Surely they would allow us to stay overnight with them, they answered in reply to our question of staying there. Before the evening was half over, we knew, by name, all of the inhabitants on the planet. Next door to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis was the home of Jean Farland, who worked with Ada Aaron in a store where styles were originated for the whole planet. Marion Knight is the model, and a very good one at that. About eighty miles away from where we were staying lived Alice Scahill and Marie Kelly, makers of airplane togs. We went across the street to the hangar of Lillian Sealander and Alice Reindeau, airplane owners. Here we rented a plane to make the trip to Alice and Marie's home. As Helen was an aviatrix, there was no need of hiring anyone to pilot the ship. We reached there in eight minutes, but not before we had been stopped by a traffic cop who made us land. The cop was none other than Mary Lester. Seeing who we were, instead of arresting us, the cop invited us over to her home. This stop took us two minutes, but in that time we met Bertha Mayforth and Mary Feldman, who are owners of an amusement park there. After this extremely short conversation, Mary Lester said she would let us off without a fine, providing it never happened again. She had to make the report, though. We didn't care, because the chief of police was James Fitzgerald. He would surely let us off, for old time's sake. Alice and Marie were more than delighted when we got there. The plane, in the meantime, had sprung a leak, and if Helen had not been a mechanic as well as a pilot, we wouldn't be here now. We had tea with the girls, talked about different things, but had to hurry away before it grew dark. Oh! before I go on, I must tell you what Helen Serafino has been doing since graduation. She went out for greater things, and soon became the president of the company that financed the tours in the rocket Rosera.

Next morning we said goodbye to all our friends and boarded the rocket. Someone in the crowd threw us a package. It read, "Do not open until you reach the earth." Although we wanted to, we didn't. We had a very pleasant journey back to our own land. Even though the planets are surprisingly comfortable, give me the good old U. S. A. every time. Helen said, "Check and Double Check!" We landed on the observatory and immediately proceeded to open the package. We were dumbfounded to see that it was a large framed picture of all the former Commercites on every one of the planets. We felt repaid double-fold for our trip. The command, "All aboard for the trip to the planets," again reached our ears, and how we longed to return and thank our old pals for the wonderful gift.

"Why, Helen and Anna! This is a surprise! Where have you been?" This greeting came as we stepped from the Rosera. All speaking at once, were four passengers ready for the next trip. They were Stella Presz, author of the most popular book of the day, Three Little Words; her publisher, Donald Holloway, and his wife, formerly Eleanor Small; and Yetta Mishkin, who was to accompany them as secretary. We immediately wrote a note to be given to Joseph Maroney, thanking the former Commercites for their very much appreciated gift, which Helen and I would hang in our apartment. Then we said good-bye to Robert and the other friends and returned to our home for a much needed rest, but full of joy at our pleasant and surprising reunions with our friends of 1931.

Reminiscing

June 18, 1936

Dearest Agnes,

I just had to write! No doubt you remember that song that was so popular when we were at Commerce, a beautiful thing called Reminiscing? Its remembered, or rather, familiar strains now fill my room. I have to pause and think of the happy hours we spent at our dear old Alma Mater. Those hours will always be dear and fondly cherished.

We entered Commerce in September, 1928 (I have to smile now, it seems so long ago), a group of wide-eyed, verdant freshmen clamoring for the knowledge we didn't possess. Do you remember our first big function, the Freshman Reception? How proudly we showed Mother and Dad about the school! Then, will you ever forget the day we girls were initiated? With our chins done up for the mumps effect, and our arm in a sling, we were as proud as if bedecked for our Prom.

Father Time was kind to us, and turned his clock around so swiftly that soon we found ourselves XA's. Imagine! Now we were advanced freshmen, not so green and uneducated as before. Our thoughts were immediately diverted to our first dance, which was held in the Gym., amid gaily colored streamers and the music of "Syd Cooley's Commanders." It was a great success, wasn't it, Ag? Then, remember how we all waited with great anticipation for our next social which was held in the evening?

The following September we again entered. Gosh, I felt like a warrior of old, after only one year. Didn't you? Then our long awaited XIB Hop was held in the form of a May Festival. It certainly was a wow! You remember, Ag, we practically melted, dancing that night — just another of those warm fall evenings.

We certainly found a very versatile entertainer among us this semester. It was none other than Milt Krentz, our class president, who could with dexterity play the violin and harmonica at the same time. I also remember petite Eleanor Smith, who surely could toe-dance.

Of course you recall the Christmas assembly we gave jointly with the XIA's. Our guests were the members of the Homes for Aged Women and Aged Men. Harold Stanton certainly had the feminine eyes focused on him when he dashed on to the stage with a girl's red beret placed jauntily on his head.

When we were XIA's, we were not far from the border of "Seniorland". Our social was the high light of the semester. Remember the red-hot rhythm Bert Hall and his "Fashion Park Orchestra" gave us? We all agreed that the time of socials should be lengthened.

Isabel Dean and Ruth Simpson won honors by receiving the Washington-Franklin Medal for excellence in American history. Aviation also took a hold at Commerce this year, when a Model Aeroplane Club was founded by Stephen Lemanis.

With the passing of this semester, we found our beloved principal, Carlos B. Ellis, resigning. Agnes, whenever I see him, one little saying comes into my mind:

"People may come,
People may go,
But memories of one
Live on forever."

Then we came back again in September, 1930. We were on our last lap, participants in a long race filled with obstacles and illusions. This fall we had a new principal, Jerome Burtt, who established himself firmly with us all.

Have you forgotten how our hopes were somewhat dimmed by our football season, but when Freddie Teece, our brilliant center, made the All-City Team, things seemed brighter? Vic Mari, Johnny Lagunowich, Red O'Brien, and Alex Campbell made brilliant plays, too. And, speaking of sports, say, Ag, how did we make out in basketball that season? Somehow, I have a vague idea that the boys of our class played well.

Our Football Dance (XIIB, you recall), was a peach, wasn't it, Ag? The gym. was so attractively decorated with football pennants, college banners, and miniature goal posts to represent a field. I remember you wanted to take home the goal posts as a souvenir of the dance!

Our senior play, The Goose Hangs High, was a great success. Probably much of that was due to the parts enacted by XIIB's, namely Ruth Simpson, Fred Teece, Dot Wakefield, and Frank Mullen.

Remember we found an orator among us, when Phil Gorman made a strong bid for the name of champion debater in the school?

One cold February morning I climbed up three flights of stairs at Commerce, thinking how many times more I would go through the same process. 'Seems funny, but now I'd give 'most anything to climb right up those stairs again.

Time seemed to fly that semester. What a conceited bunch we turned out to be, when it came to having our graduation pictures. I guess we all expected to look like those old favorites, John Gilbert and Greto Garbo. I was looking over some of them the other day, and I certainly wish I were sixteen again.

Then came Class Day. What a day! A day with mingled sadness and gladness, quiet tears and loud laughter. Remember how Miss Eldridge and Miss Jefferson were so worried about our class day? But, they must have been very proud when all was said and done. It was a great success, wasn't it, Ag? Gosh, I guess I'll never forget that day!

Can't you taste that banquet now? That chicken — that dessert — oh, boy, it was great! But above all was our Prom. Beautiful gowns (out of style, now), beautiful music, and beautiful-er--girls. I can't forget it all. It's just as clear as crystal. I don't want to forget, do you?

Well, so we were graduated. No more waiting for the 8:10 car, no more tedious homework, no more school dances, but plenty of memories. The strains of the old song have long since stopped, but I wanted you to go on with me for a while, reminiscing.

Love from

Your old school pal,

SHIRLEY WHITING

P. S. Say, Agnes, I came across the list of all our class officers, so I copied them for old times' sake. I thought you'd be interested.

Will of the Class of June, 1931

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS, that we, the Class of June, 1931, of the High School of Commerce, city of Springfield, County of Hampden, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, realizing the uncertainty of life and being of sound mind, memory, and judgment, do hereby make, declare, and publish this to be our last will and testament, revoking and renouncing all former wills and testaments by us at any time heretofore made, and do earnestly desire that these, our last requests, be carried out as herein after directed.

First: To Mr. Jerome Burtt, our principal, we leave our deep appreciation for his wise guidance throughout our Senior year at Commerce.

Second: To Mr. Carlos B. Ellis, our former principal, we give and bequeath our most sincere respect and gratitude.

Third: To Miss Vera Eldridge, our faculty adviser, we leave our warmest appreciation for her untiring efforts in all our activities.

Fourth: To Miss Eleanor Jefferson, our assistant adviser, we bequeath our sincere thanks for her help to us.

Fifth: To all members of the faculty we bequeath our gratitude for the knowledge we have received from them.

Sixth: To Miss Harriet M. Johnson, Miss Edith Marsden, and Mr. Donald Melville we leave our sincere appreciation for their work on the year book, Caduceus.

Seventh: Harold Stanton leaves to Richard Putnam this recipe for rosy cheeks.

Eighth: Fern Egan leaves her ability to bluff with Mr. Jackson and get away with it to any freshman who dares to try it.

Ninth: Lawrence Griffin wills this desert island, where there are no women, to Harvey Pepin.

Tenth: Rita Dorval and Eunice Turner leave this chain of friendship to Charlotte Johnson and Helen Gulbrandson.

Eleventh: Lincoln Warner leaves these suspenders to Ray Lewis.

Twelfth: Eleanor Smith leaves her ability to chew gum for three years and not get caught, to anyone who wishes to try it.

Thirteenth: To Mr. Melville we leave this megaphone, so that he may be heard in his future rallies.

Fourteenth: Kenneth Andersen leaves his famous blush to John Driscoll.

Fifteenth: Shirley Whiting bequeaths this lipstick to Mr. Brooks, so he will know that at least one stick is in safe keeping.

Sixteenth: Alex Campbell leaves his ability in sports and scholastic standing to Billy LaBroad.

Seventeenth: Catherine Perry leaves this pad, with pencil attached, to Mr. Taylor, so he will be able to carry out his point system in his history classes when he loses his pencil.

Eighteenth: Fred Teece leaves to the hero of next year's play his ability to make love on the stage.

Nineteenth: Eleanor Shumway leaves this small debating book to Mr. Shipway, so that he may gather information for his debatable questions.

Twentieth: Melvin Pauly leaves to Melvin Kopelman his very great ability as a French student.

Twenty-First: Marion Kirkcaldy leaves this box of A's to Mr. Pease to give to his future English classes.

Twenty-Second: Milton Krentz leaves this harmonica to Mr. Jackson, so that it will end his countless night floorwalks with his young son.

Twenty-Third: Marjorie Boylan leaves to the G. A. A. treasurer her ability to pay overdue bills without showing any embarrassment.

Twenty-Fourth: Bernice Radcliffe leaves this book of nursery rhymes to Miss Halligan to use in her next kindergarten class in Economics.

Twenty-Fifth: Emmeline King leaves her courageous attitude when confronting Mr. Pease to any freshman who is afraid of him.

Twenty-Sixth: Maria Bianchi and Annette Bresky leave their ability to collect money to all Commerce agents and collectors of class dues.

Twenty-Seventh: Elmer Butler, class president, leaves to Ralph Bergeron, president of the class of January, 1932, this gavel to be used to conduct his class meetings successfully.

Twenty-Eighth: To Mr. Jerome Burtt, our principal, we leave this blank check to be filled out by him, the amount of the check to be the amount left after the payment of all just debts by us incurred.

We, therefore, the Class of June, 1931, do publish and declare this to be our last will and testament, and have caused the signatures of these witnesses to be engraved upon this document; and we do hereunto set our hand and seal at our residence in the High School of Commerce, this seventeenth day of April in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirty-One.

MERLE DANIEL
LUCILE MOREHOUSE

The City In The Sea

WHEN my employer told me that I was in for another boring day in my hunt for lost ships under the sea, I told him that he was wrong. He was. My employment card had me listed as "Undersea Explorer; age, 106." This may seem unusual, but because of my life under the sea, I have lived longer than ordinary human beings.

I wandered along aimlessly. My diving suit was a bit warm, but I couldn't go back up and face my employer's laughter. Suddenly I saw a light glimmering shakily, and feared that I would be hit by a passenger submarine, with which the seas were infested. I went closer cautiously and found to my astonishment that the light was not moving. My fears were now gone, and I was merely inquisitive. With every step my courage increased, until I stumbled on some rocks which, it appeared, served as steps. Apparently, then, I was not the only human being here. I ascended, and the mystery of the flickering lights was explained. There, right before me, was an old-fashioned liner of the type used about 1040 for trans-oceanic voyages. I climbed up a coral tree and looked into a port-hole. Evidently, there was news of my approach, because everyone looked up with a strange expression on his face as mine appeared at the port-hole. A familiar-looking man strode masterfully towards me, and in spite of myself, I was quaking inside. What under the sea could he be so cross about? However, I stood my ground, or rather my tree, and awaited my fate.

Can you imagine? The masterful brute was no other than Alex Campbell. My hopes soared landward. Would he recognize me? It was most unlikely, as I was entirely covered by my diver's suit. I rubbed the glasses frantically and tried to look like an old friend. Sad to say, my little scheme fell through.

"Say, you," Alex thundered, "if you must intrude, why not come in through the doorway instead of playing 'Peeping Tom'?"

Scrambling down, I was all apologies. "Why, Alex," I pleaded, "you wouldn't turn out an old classmate, would you?"

"Classmate! My sunken speed boat, you certainly have nerve! How can you be my classmate? You're not a citizen of Comscradville."

"A citizen of what?" I gasped.

"I said Comscradville. It is a village whose citizens are entirely Commerce grads. If you pronounce it quickly, you will understand the name."

"Well," I replied, "you may not believe me, but I have lived on earth all these years as a specimen of former human life, because of my age. You see, we are all older than ordinary Earth Men. May I come in?"

"Certainly. I don't think introductions are necessary," he added after he had brought me around to the cabin door and inside the Comscradville Nite Club.

A piercing blare and a thundering roll of drums greeted me so forcibly that I was tempted to run. When it subsided, I uncovered my ears and looked for the noise-makers. Directing a huge orchestra was none other than Milton Krentz. He wore a brass hat and had a leather strap flung over his shoulder. From it hung a French horn, an English horn, a clarinet, and a veritable family of wind instruments. Naturally, I was surprised, because I had seen Milton play only stringed instruments and the harmonica. Henry Gordon informed me that as Milton was director of the orchestra, it benefited the music if he had a knowledge of all the instruments composing it.

Sitting in the middle of a nest of drums was the Commerce drummer, Stephen Lemanis. Added to his accomplishments was that of a xylophone player. He seemed to have no difficulty in picking out which drum he liked best at the time being. The picture was not quite complete, however, so I gazed around, and there, looking very natural behind his French horn, was Kenneth Andersen. On the chair next to him reposed an English horn. It was plain to the observer that he contemplated starting a musical League of Nations.

But where was — ah, there was Phil Walters. He seemed to be trying to get everyone's attention for something. Now, the megaphone to his assistance:

"All ready, folks, for the big event of the evening. Are you all set? Miss Helen Schott has consented to entertain us this evening with her interpretations of four old-time songs: Captain of the Guard, Sweetheart of My Student Days, I'm Yours, and Three Little Words. She is to be assisted by Marion Kennedy, who will accompany her on the violin."

The two girls came forward and presented their part of the entertainment. In the meantime, I looked around. There they were: the old gang buzzing in a corner about something of obvious importance to them. The group included Genevieve Oszajca, Dorothy Mochak, Eunice Turner, Rita Dorval, Merle Daniel, and Harold Stanton. Apparently they were aware of my scrutiny, for they all came towards me. Greetings from all sides reached me, and I was soon mingling with the crowd. I missed some of the old gang, and inquired about them.

"Who? Oh, Vic Mari is a gentleman farmer. He has a private yacht on which he has brought soil and cultivated it. I guess he is pretty good. Jack Strain is assisting him as gardener. See John Redin over there? He is the author of The Lost Art of Blushing." I received this information from Harriette Brunelle, who had joined us.

"You must come to court tomorrow," Grace Brooks informed me. "Alice Cohen is suing for damages received from an alarm clock."

"From an alarm clock? How could that hurt anyone?" I exclaimed.

"Well, she bought an alarm clock from Oliver Minney, who owns a hardware store. She says that she asked if it was noiseless, and Oliver told her it was. Now she is suing him for five thousand pearls because she has a broken ear drum. Alice testified that the alarm went off at the hour of 3 A. M. and pierced her ear drums. Her lawyer is Doris Krevalin, and Oliver's case is to be handled by Dave Suher. It sounds like an interesting case."

Thelma Steele and Laurence Carey came up just then, and as Laurence had a paper, I proceeded to read. From the masthead of the Coms Chronicler, I learned that Betty Shea was Editor-in-Chief and was assisted by Will Rose as Sports Editor, Katherine Roumeliotis as News Editor, and Edith Ascher in charge of editorials. The reporters were Louise Bonphith, Helen Bousquet, Nina Belsky, Muriel Young, and Dot Silver. Annette Bresky was Staff Cartoonist. From the newspaper I learned that Troop 31 of the Girl Guides of Yachtland had visited the Seaside Hospital, whose owners were Dr. Harold Relihan and Dr. Donald Fabian. The Girl Guides, including Germaine Bouchard, Helen Barry, Sadie Bryan, Stella Cebula, Clara Bruno, Catherine Barry, Maria Bianchi, and Stella Brzys, was an organization formed by Myrtle Gray and Mary O'Connor.

When I inquired about the hospital, Celia Bregman told me that Vivian Snyder and Agnes Turner are graduate nurses of the Clamville Memorial Training School. On the staff with them are Eleanor McCarthy, Coula Lolos, Bessie Lolos, Melicent Schweigman, Molly Ksionzek, Alice H. Smith, Dorothy Keyes, and Alice M. Smith. It is the most popular hospital in town. In fact, it is the only one.

In the midst of my perusal of the newspaper, I was interrupted by another announcer. This time it was John Lagunowich. "Ladies, gentlemen, and friends. Tonight, Miss Eleanor Smith will, for your benefit, render her newest dance, which she calls The Clam's Cackle. She is to be accompanied by Irene Bergen, who will follow the dance with the first presentation of her latest song hit, entitled Before We Became Fish."

Blonde Eleanor Smith made her appearance, and because of the clam shells covering the toes of her slippers, a queer crackling sound issued forth. She has lost none of her dancing ability. That little bit of pep, Irene Bergen, then sang, and the new song certainly went over big.

After she had finished, everyone started whispering mysteriously and darting glances towards one corner. Naturally, I looked. There stood Harvey Johnson, trying his best to conceal something under his coat. Standing near him were Melvin Pauly, John Dwyer, and Louis Phillip. I inquired, but received no answer. At a signal from Phil, Harvey stepped up to the platform and announced that the coral loving-cup which he held had been won by Melvin Pauly, Billy Dwyer, Joe Allen, and John Dwyer for their exceptionally accurate playing at sea golf. Bill Dwyer, the captain, came forward, murmured his thanks, and disappeared.

"Now for the annual treat." Phil Gorman had the floor. "Emma Christofferson is going to give us an example of her ability as an elocutionist. The role of lady-in-waiting will be played by Geraldine Cohen."

Emma appeared in the robes of an ancient queen in the playlet entitled My Court Under the Sea. Geraldine flattered her in her position as lady-in-waiting to the illustrious queen.

"My lady, what thinkest thou of the attitude of Sir Herbert, son of the House of Pace?" queried the queen.

"Your Majesty knows, as do all her friends, that Sir Herbert admires you from afar, but chooses to stay afar. His Grace the Duke of Gullberg is a rare gentleman also, milady."

"Prithee, madam, what meanest thou?"said the queen, pretending not to understand.

"I mean that he doth not dislike your Majesty. No one could dislike thee."

There was no doubt that the two girls were clever. I wandered towards a port-hole and looked out. Glimmering in its softly solitude was a tiny light. I asked Helen Berlin what it was.

"Oh, you haven't seen anything until you have seen that. Ruth Coughlin, Rose Dowd, Annie Brown, Michelina Cuiffreda, Lena Ugolini, Arline Linscott, Eunice Greany, Phyllis Hamilton, Jessie Sargent, and Ingrid Salmela are members of a society they have formed. Its name is I Insisted I Wouldn't Go Out With Him. These girls live in solitude, and there isn't a man allowed there."

This information so surprised me that I grasped the newspaper for support. Directly under my hand I saw the name Simpson. After reading the article, I discovered that Isabel Dean and Ruth Simpson were participating in a contest, the object of which was to write the most concise history of Comscradville. The prize this time was to be a necklace carved from whalebone.

In the margin I noticed an advertisement announcing the annual inventory sale of the Luippold Publishing Company. The staff artists, Mildred Corbeil and Lillian Meyers, would accommodate to the best of their ability in illustrating. For appointments one must consult with Ethel McIntosh, secretary.

Below that was the advertisement of the Kites Insurance Company, owned and operated by Barbara Kites. She specializes in selling insurance against divorces within a year of marriage.

I looked around and discovered that everyone was leaving. I realized that I had to stay somewhere down here over night. I spied dainty Doris Duquette looking very winsome sitting next to Cleon McArthur, so I went up to them and asked if there was a hotel where I might stay.

"The ideal hotel of the city is the Comscradville Hotel. Lincoln Warner owns it. We'll take you there if you wish," announced Cleon.

"Tell me about it," I demanded.

"Well," said Doris, "Paul Stenta is the manager. It is entirely modern. Before meals there is a lobby entertainment that is splendid. · Some of the girls in it are Julia London, Emma Pomstein, Rosalie Cooley, Beatrice Greenberg, Rose Petlock, Molly Horwitz, and Anna Gold."

While walking along the road that was like a subway because of its covering overhead, we met Annie Hunter. She proudly displayed a medal which stated that she was the tallest person in Comscradville. Doris continued talking to me about the hotel, as soon as Annie had gone along. "The switchboard is under the supervision of Anna Gamelli. Under her serve Estelle Farant, Ruth Holmes, Marion Holdridge, Lena Mackler, Emily Fuerst, Edith Hickland, Anna Gracka, and Gwen McKahan. The two public stenographers are Dot Fairchild and Geneva Wemyss."

At the hotel we were greeted by Everett Wren, doorman. We were ushered to the desk and met Selly Kramer, the clerk. After we signed the register, Selly yelled, "Front," and Bertha Young stood there dressed as a bell hop. She showed us to the elevator. To our astonishment, we found that Adelia Glaze was the operator. From the girls I learned that all the bell hops were girls. They included Lydia Manley, Florence Mead, Eleanor Mahoney, Sadie Levenson, Eleanor Lawler, Bertha Flagg, and Mary Garvey. Dorothea Lauppe and Georgiana Fountain are in charge of them.

"But what about you?" I asked Adelia.

"All the elevators are operated by girls," was her answer. "The rest of them are Muriel Fuller, Ethel Goldberg, Nellie Maroon, Edna Puggioli, and Molly Sibley."

By that time, we had arrived at my room, and in there I found Christine Monahan tidying things. I asked her to call me in the morning, and went to bed.

When Christine called me, she said that breakfast was served in the dining-room. On the way downstairs, I noticed a sign bearing the statement: "Kabaposs Beauty Salon. Blondes are our specialty." I went in and found Alice Kabokawich and Mary Possnick conferring. Over in a corner was Vartan Omartian, cutting Lawrence Griffin's hair. I went over and spoke to Lawrence. He told me that he had just returned from a trip with Loyal Winne, Genave Jerominek, and Grace Bosworth. They had been doing welfare work among the mermaids.

I didn't know whether to believe him or not, so I said nothing, but glanced around. In doing so, I noticed Annie Zandan, Mabel Philp, Elsie Youngquist, Catherine Perry, and Helen Pauly marcelling the hair of victims whose faces were covered. After speaking to each of them, I continued my journey to the dining-room.

Pauline Debour and Helen Daley walked up and showed me the way. Marie Koenig, who was head dietitian, showed me to a table where I was waited on by Elva Cotter. While eating, I noticed Bridget Migut, Germaine Hope, Dot Flanagan, and Rachel Zandan darting back and forth in waitresses' uniforms.

Going out, I met Loretta O'Shea and Verica Olivish on their way down town. I joined them, and on the street I noticed some billboards announcing the coming election. Ottilio Giustina was running for president of the community, Aurelia Wanat for vice-president, Helen Shea for secretary, and Muriel Satter for treasurer. Emily Schlenk was in the race for auditor.

"Where are you bound for?" Loretta asked me.

"I want to get some clothes, but I don't know where to go. Can you help me?" I asked.

"The most popular dress shops are the FERNE and KARP'S. Fern Egan owns the former. None of her clothes are factory-made, but are made by her employees. She also hires models who make clothes. You know them. Eileen Smyth, Mary L'Annunziata, Dot Carlson, Janet Barnes, Marcelle Douillard, Berenice Wellman, and Marion Kirkcaldy are her star dressmakers. As for KARP'S, Mary Karp owns that. All her clothes are bought from manufacturers. Her buyer is Barbara Hall, who is assisted by Mary Horgan. Although the handwork on her gowns may not be so exquisite, they cost about two-thirds as much as clothes from the FERNE do."

"Well," I replied, "I do hope she can fit me." However, I should not have worried, because when I arrived at the FERNE, I found clothes enough to last me the rest of my days. Many of my old pals were there watching the models. I sat down between Ruth Abrams and Annie Arslanian, and waited for the models to show their stuff. To my surprise, Clara Bloom and Esther Black led the gay parade. Clara was so thin I hardly recognized her. After these two came Odna Foley, Margaret Flynn, Esther Fineberg, and Annie Davidson. Down the aisle marched the models, accompanied by music furnished by Ruth Cram. One by one they greeted me as they passed. While I waited for Victoria Broska, the fitter, I had quite a conversation with Eunice Budri. She told me that Laurette Cardinal, May Maruca, Ethel Plourde, Eleanor Shumway, Barbara Proctor, and Priscilla Osterman had just returned from a sea voyage. Each had gone for a different purpose. Laurette and May went pearl hunting. Barbara, Priscilla, and Ethel went because they had nothing better to do at the time, and Eleanor was trying to find a way to better the civic and economic industries of Comscradville.

The word "economic" reminded me of school, so I asked Ruth Norton if there was a school in Comscradville.

"Yes," she answered. "Elmer Butler owns the Butler Prep. School. Almost all the business subjects are taught there. Cecilia Cetnarowska teaches typewriting; Amelia Prokop, shorthand; Florence Johnson and Sarah Rice teach bookkeeping. Emily Keinath is instructor in English and Penelope Papafrangos in philosophy. History is taught by Stella Winning, and Marjorie Boylan is the gym. teacher. Frank Schmid teaches journalism, and Shirley Whiting runs a private kindergarten."

In answer to my inquiry, Helen Slonka told me that Winifred Long and Bernice Howard specialize in helping out the male students of Butler Prep. as they used to help out Bay Path students. I learned also that Phyllis LaFleur is the author of Psychological Events Leading to the Discovery of Comscradville.

My gown finished, once again I joined Loretta, and the suggestion that we see an entertainment was downed by my craving for refreshment. We selected Guagliardo's Restaurant and seated ourselves in a booth. A familiar-looking person approached us to take our order, and it was no one but Robert Bliss. When he recognized us, he called together the other waiters, and I came face to face with more of our old class. There were Zundell Black, Joe O'Brien, Alfred Brouillette, John Creanza, Joseph Fenton, and Sam Grodsky. Patsy Carabetta was behind a counter trying to jerk soda and talk to Rachel Pease at the same time, and he was making a good job of it.

After our meal we went to the Pearl Palace. At this theatre, all the ushers were standing in the lobby when we entered. Our tickets were taken by Aaron Sherman. The show hadn't started, so we stopped to talk to the ushers. They were Al Pooley, Wallace Loehn, Fred Bull, Charles Weiner, Duryea Keefe, John Kalenkowitz, Irving Kanner, and Tom McCormack. I told Loretta that they looked like the West Point Cadets in their gray uniforms.

We had no sooner sat down than someone tapped me on the shoulder. I turned around, and there stood James Makol and Stanley Ciak. Stanley, as usual, was looking for football pointers. He asked if we had seen any good games lately, but I told him that since he and Fred Teece had stopped playing, I hadn't even attended any of the games.

When glancing around, I saw Anna Conti. Loretta told me that Anna was stage manager, and Walter Hatcher was the electrician. I remarked about the beautiful scene on the curtain, and was informed that Ada Hayden, scene painter, had done it.

As the curtain rose, Eleanor Burdick and Lucille Pease came forward. They sang The Call of the Mermaid. After they had finished, the feature picture was shown. It was taken from a play written by Bernice Radcliffe. It was a short skit centering upon the difficulties a certain man experienced because of his moon-like countenance. The part of the hero was taken by that clever actor, Frank Mullen. His secretary was Margaret Robarge, and his valet was the inimitable Abraham Newman. It seems that the hero was pursued by many women, some of whom were played by Grace Belcher, Ellen Andersen, Enez Ballatore, Ruth Scheffer, Mae Nelson, Mary Murphy, and Rose McCarthy. The man who helped Mr. Mullen escape many serious lawsuits was his attorney, Stuart Reynolds.

Accompanying the feature was a comedy, advertised as "Skeeber and Heit, the only Sea People who can imitate those old-time favorites, Laurel and Hardy." The participants proved to be Harry Skeeber and Max Heit.

Just as the last reel finished, I heard a curious noise strangely resembling a fog-horn. I looked, and not far from me saw Mary Washburn, who was enjoying one of her frequent colds. She was with Dorothy Wakefield, Rhea Vanasse, and Bernice Webb. The girls were busy quieting Mary, so I didn't interfere.

After the show, we went back to the hotel and called upon Helen Megas. Helen was in the midst of preparation for an informal dinner to which I was invited. Genevieve and Helen Nowak were helping her arrange the seating plan. The dinner was in one of the private dining-rooms of the hotel. Some of the guests were Nellie Niemiec, Rita Moreton, Linda Toro, Natalie Siciliano, Mary Noonan, Ida Orkin, Thelma Norbery, and Minnie Moffett. After the dinner, Pearl Martin and Avis Morris, who are proprietors of a dancing-school, entertained with a dance. They were accompanied by Adelaide Thrasher on the piano.

Just when the girls were running out of conversation, in came Nancy Taylor, Helen C. V. Shea, Viola Robinson, Helen Sherman, Lucile Morehouse, Sarah Sakowitz, and Helen St. John. They were all on the jury for the next day's trial, Cohen versus Minney, and were much excited about it.

When Grace Olson asked me what I intended to do, I was at a loss for an answer. Gretchen Laffert came to my rescue and explained to me what she meant. "Are you going back to Earth, or will you remain here with us?"

I really didn't know, so I said nothing.

Fannie Taub then suggested, "Why don't you go back and fix your business relations and everything, and then come back to us?"

I realized that hers was the only possible solution. I couldn't go back to Earth and live there when all my friends were in Comscradville. After having told the Earth People of my discovery, I am going back to live in Comscradville.

Classic

Rain poured down. Black clouds hid the sky, and try as I might, not in even one could I find a Silver lining. Here I was, far from home, curled disconsolately in one of Farmer Melville's Barnes, musing on the beauty of being lost. The Bull in the stable near me stamped an impatient foot and I jumped nervously. I never had liked a Bull even at a distance, and this one was terrifyingly near. A wee chick was wandering aimlessly about me, murmuring "Hatcher! Hatcher!" I listened drowsily until I became suddenly aware of a feeble "cheep". Startled, I looked down at the curve my arm made in the hay, and found that I'd been playing "mother" to a nest of eggs, one of which had just hatched, and two or three others, scrambled. I rose hastily and sought a more comfortable place in which to woo sleep. Behind me I could hear the irate mother hen scolding, "Kanner, Kanner!" I was glad that she had returned after I had left her nest, and hoped that she would not now find me.

Suddenly, I heard Farmer Melville enter the Barnes and begin to call, "Minney, Minney." I drew back into the shadows and prayed that I wouldn't be seen. I wondered idly who "Minney" was, and as though in answer to that wonder, I heard a dog's gayly challenging bark and knew to whom the name belonged.

I must have fallen asleep then, for I suddenly found myself in the iron grasp of an angry man who was shaking me furiously.

"Well, you little tramp!" he exclaimed as he discovered I was awake, "what have you to say for yourself?"

"Let go of me, G. D.," I said indignantly.

He held me out from him.

"Now how did you know my name?" he asked.

"You'd be surprised," I grumped.

"If it wasn't too much of a Strain on my imagination," G. D. said meditatively, "I'd think you were Helen Bousquet."

"At your service," I replied.

"Well, well," he rumbled, shaking my hand, "how did you ever get here?"

"Fell out of a truck and a tramp chased me into your Barnes."

"The Barnes make a pretty good shelter to Winne in case of trouble," Mr. Melville remarked proudly. "Come along, lady," he went on, "and I'll feed you and send you home."

"Hurray," said I, following him into the house.

"Have a drink of water from our Brooks, while I get you some supper," I was told.

I took a Brown cup he offered and quaffed the cold, sweet water eagerly.

"Good," I praised.

Mr. Melville's voice came muffled from the next room: "Be with you in a minute. A Cotter-pin just fell out."

"Don't Cram it in," I advised sleepily.

"There's the 'Daley,' if you want to read it," he shouted.

"See if it comes up to your Bulletin."

I read the paper while he prepared supper and then the two of us, the Dean of Dean's Academy and his Fairchild, Dorothy, who had dropped in, ate hungrily of the good food.

"Oh, Farmer Melville," the little girl broke in, "you forgot to take the Flagg in tonight."

Into the Gray night he went and pulled down the Flagg, calling back that Dorothy merited a Gold piece for her patriotism.

About this time my eyes began to Glaze with sleep, and I was led through the Hall to a quiet bedroom where I fell asleep to the plashing of the Fountain outside my window.

The next morning Mr. Melville mounted me on his Hunter, King, and swinging to his mare, Hope, threw a bunch of Keyes to Minney.

"Put them away," he ordered, and the dog disappeared.

For miles we rode; through the little village of London and down the Long road leading to Berlin. At Berlin, a Manley Young fellow watered our horses and gave us a drink. His name, he told us, was Martin Maroon.

"This horse isn't quite a Morris chair, is it?" I murmured, but received only a chuckle in reply.

"Would you rather walk home?" G. D. twinkled.

"Nowak!" I exclaimed firmly.

As we continued our journey, I had a small Rice field, a Wren, a Cardinal, and some Kites pointed out to me.

"I'll hit that tree with a piece of wood," he wagered, and, as I laughed, he did so.

"Good Schott!" I giggled.

"Shumway," he said complacently, "I always do manage to hit the Bull's eye."

"Look," I cried clutching his arm, "there's a police Sargent and he's heading this way."

Even as I spoke, the Sargent reined in by me and asked, "Miss Bousquet?"

I nodded and he reported that a general alarm had been sent out for me that morning.

"But I see you're in good hands," he said, "so I'll leave you," and saluting, he wheeled about and vanished.

A short time later we entered my home, Wakefield, and G. D., refusing to stay, cantered away, while with what I hoped was a Winning smile, I entered my home to be greeted with, "So they didn't Steele you after all!"

"No," said I, "but I want a bed, and I Wanat bad!"

Class Song

Commerce halls will change more
As each year goes by,
When our class goes onward
Their new paths to try.
Teachers will remember
Pranks of olden days,
But our lives will differ
As we trod new ways.

Commerce High we're leaving,
So we bid good-bye.
All our pals go with us
Tears well in their eyes.
Keep us in your memory,
As friends good and true,
For we leave your class-rooms
Filled with love for you.

Hoist Sails

Hoist sails! Ye Senior class —
The class of thirty-one —
For onto life's sea ye'll pass,
At sound of the sunrise gun.

To be swept into channels deep,
Channels of darkness and light,
Channels of peace and fight,
Channels where minds are asleep.

To be swept into channels rough,
Channels of snowlands and palm.
Channels of tempest and calm.
Channels where none cry, "Enough".

To be swept into channels long,
Channels of worldliness and home.
Channels of land life and foam,
Channels where prevail the strong.

To be swept into channels wide,
Channels of trials and joys,
Channels of silence and noise.
Channels where God abides.

So, hoist sails! Ye Senior class —
The class of thirty-one —
For onto life's sea ye'll pass,
At sound of the sunrise gun.

RAY SWEENEY

Woefully incomplete this book would be without mention of Ray Sweeney, the boy who has asked no quarter of Life, has whined no excuses, and, greatest of all, has met with a smile and gallant courage his physical disability.

ATHLETICS

The Caduceus Sport Year

"Cannon to right of them,
Cannon to left of them,
Cannon in front of them. . . . .
Into the jaws of death,
Into the mouth of hell
Rode the six hundred."

[Alfred Tennyson]

Mr. Tennyson's quotation greatly exaggerates the comparison which is in the act of being expressed, but the likeness, though overstated, is nevertheless partially justified. An imaginative person can substitute High School opponents for the destruction-bearing cannon, and the teams for the six hundred.

A total of fifty-six "cannon" appeared against the Crimson seven "squadrons". Success was with the latter in winning but an even dozen battles. On forty-three occasions did the opponents rise to the situation and squash the Commerce brigades. Once, did a fighting Crimson squad hold a victorless decision against a rival "cannon." Just as Tennyson's six hundred rode forward to meet the enemy, so did the High School of Commerce athletic teams ride straight at their opponents, never seeking escape by the open rear.

The battles which are now known as "The Caduceus Sport Year" started in the spring of 1930 when a baseball and a track team launched what subsequently turned out to be unsuccessful schedules. Baseball came to a close with a record for Commerce of three wins and ten losses. Track was a distinct failure from the point of view of winning. On the four occasions of competition, the opposing forces took all the decisions. Les Maynard, first baseman and captain of baseball, and his teammate Harry Skeeber, second sacker, were the outstanding individuals of the team for the entire season. Byron Rich, alias the one-man track team, was the only prominent athlete on the track squad.

When school opened in September, Harold W. Jones, a Springfield College graduate, became assistant director of physical education, succeeding Robert G. Elliott, who resigned in June to study in the Graduate School at Columbia University.

The fall sports of 1930, football and soccer, also ended in nigh chaotic fashion. The gridiron sport terminated with one victory in seven games. Fred Teece, center and captain, was the outstanding member of the pigskin forces. Injuries to several members of the team were the main reasons for such an unsuccessful grid venture. Soccer ended its second season with not a single win over opponents. William La Broad stood head and shoulders over any of the other members of the Commerce booting club. Ten defeats, however, were recorded.

The crew had a more successful season than any other Crimson team. In two races, the oarsmen won one and lost another. In addition to winning one race, the crew had the honor of being the first ever to gain a victory in that sport in Commerce's history.

The winter sports of 1930-31, basketball and hockey, were slightly better than any of the others — if close figuring is consulted. Five victories and nine defeats were registered in the hoop sport, while hockey had two wins, three losses, and two ties. Harry Skeeber was the Crimson's outstanding hoopster, while Joseph Scully was Commerce's premier ice hockey star.

With the completion of "The Caduceus Sport Year", it is but proper to refer again to our quotation. Certainly the combined sport record of the Commerce teams is like that "Ride into the jaws of death," and all the rest, but it is not possible that it was done in vain, for

" 'Tis not whether you win or lose that counts,
But how you play the game."
